

IEWS, INSIGHTS AND PERSPECTIVES

Diane Quantic, Director of the Kansas Writing Project, edits a column for V.I.P., Views Insights and Perspectives, a newsletter for administrators who subscribe to Master Teacher, an educational support and consulting firm in Manhattan, Kansas. Published six times a year, V.I.P. goes to over seven thousand schools in the United States and Canada.

The editor welcomes manuscripts from NWP directors, T/C's, and school administrators. Manuscripts should be written for an audience of school administrators who want to know more about the teaching of writing and who especially want techniques and strategies that they can recommend to their teachers. Topics covered in past issues have included using editing groups, sentence combining, the very young writer, gathering ideas, involving parents, and personal testimony from a T/C and an elementary principal. Subjects the editor would like to include in future issues include classroom research design and results, reading and writing, writing curriculum design and implementation, more articles by administrators, and even more techniques and strategies for immediate classroom use.
